The Addendum

addendum: Something to be added, esp. to a document, a supplement.

Law Library Implements New Exams Strategies

In an effort to streamline access to and maintain proper conduct within the Law Library and adjacent student commons area, the Law Library has implemented new processes during exams. Strategies include requiring law school card access to the student commons; signage with the code of conduct and policies in the law library and on screens throughout the law school; and signs on study rooms indicating access is limited to law students. The measures, meant to ensure prioritization of law student usage and proper conduct, were tested during the last week of classes and go into effect April 21.

Law Library to Participate in Upcoming Conferences

The Law School will be the site of this year’s CALIcon Annual Conference for Law School Computing®. In June, conferencegoers from across the nations will attend sessions during the three-day event, presented by The Center for Computer-Assisted Legal Instruction, also known as CALI. During the conference, Law Library faculty and staff will be participating in the conference by conducting tours of the Law Library, as well as making presentations and attending sessions.

Columbia, SC has been selected as the site for 2021’s Annual Meeting of the Southeastern Chapter of American Association of Law Libraries (SEAALL). Law Library faculty and staff have already begun planning to host the event.

LRAW Students Give Sweet Farewell to Professor

The last day of Spring 2019 classes was also the last day of Professor James Burkhard’s Property class. Professor Burkhard teaches in the areas of Property and Business, and has taught at the Law School for over 40 years. Law students bade the retiring professor a fond farewell with a cake and well wishes. Pop-Up Tech Talk Series

The new Pop-Up Tech Talk series debuted in Spring 2019. Each Tech Talk demonstrates a discrete technology topic that students can benefit from, both now and in practice.

The Spring 2019 iteration of the program consisted of 15 talks with eight presenters, in three locations throughout the law school. Each talk lasted typically an hour or ninety minutes.

Eve Ross gathered the initial group of tech talk presenters from the law library, academic technology, career services, legal writing, and pro bono. She also designed the marketing materials. Aaron Glenn maintains the webpage law.sc.edu/techtalks, where the schedule and handouts are posted.

If faculty, staff, students, or practicing lawyers would like to suggest a topic or presenter to be added to this series, they may share their idea at law.sc.edu/techtalks.

Law Library Faculty & Staff Accomplishments

Reference Librarian Aaron Glenn presented at the Educational Technology Showcase on using LibGuides to create online textbooks and Classmarker for online quizzing. The presentation was titled "Using LibGuides and Classmarker for Content Delivery and Online Assessment In and Beyond the Classroom."

Associate Dean & Director of the Law Library Duncan Alford, and librarians Dan Brackmann, Andrew Kretschmar, and Candle Wester presented a Faculty Colloquium on updates to library resources and services. Topics included an overview of the partnership between US News and World Report and Hein; Scholar Commons; procedures for requesting library materials; New York Times digital subscriptions; and HeinOnline.

Associate Director for Library Operations Rebekah Maxwell attended the 2019 Black Law Students Association (BLSA) Banquet. She is pictured at left with Terikah Staggers, an undergraduate student at the U of SC’s Arnold School of Public Health. Upon graduation, Staggers is considering the Law School for her legal education. This semester, she has been Rebekah’s job shadow at the reference desk.
